jddean@pomlaw.com

Jay Douglas Dean focuses on class action securities litigation. He has been a commercial litigator for more than 30 years. Jay has been practicing with Pomerantz since 2008, including as an associate from 2009–2014, interrupted by a year of private practice in 2014–2015. More recently, he was part of the Pomerantz teams prosecuting the successful Petrobras and Yahoo actions. Prior to joining Pomerantz, he served as an Assistant Corporation Counsel in the Office of the Corporation Counsel of the City of New York, most recently in its Pensions Division. While at Pomerantz, in the Corporation Counsel’s office, and previously in large New York City firms, Jay has taken leading roles in trials, motions, and appeals.

Jay graduated in 1988 from Yale Law School, where he was Senior Editor of the Yale Journal of International Law.

Jay is admitted to practice in New York; the United States District Courts for the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York; and the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Jay has also earned the right to use the Chartered Financial Analyst designation.
